Some Democrats Boycott Big
Jackson Day Dinner
Over Wallace

WASHINGTON, March 25—President Truman's appeal for unity among congressional Democrats got a generally cool reception today among rebellious party members from the south.

The southerners, who have teamed up with Republicans to defeat or modify many of Mr. Truman's "must" bills, made it plain they would back administration legislation only when it met with their approval and not solely on party grounds.

Southerners "Jeffersonians"
Mr. Truman made his appeal at a $100-a-plate Jackson Day dinner here Saturday night. Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace and Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan, party chairman, also called for unity.

Typical southern reaction was that of Rep. Eugene E. Cox, D., Ga., a leader of the southern conservative bloc in the House. Cox felt that Mr. Truman was "doing a good job under the circumstances."

"But on matters of legislation," he said, "Jeffersonian and Jacksonian Democrats follow their leaders when they believe them to be right and the dictates of their own consciences when they believe them wrong."

"It would be a sorry sort of democracy if an individual were not able to vote according to his own views."

"Dictation" Opposed
Sen. John Overton, D., La. also defended the right of individual democrats to vote as they saw fit. But he expressed strong opposition to the formation of party policy by the President and a few White House advisers alone.

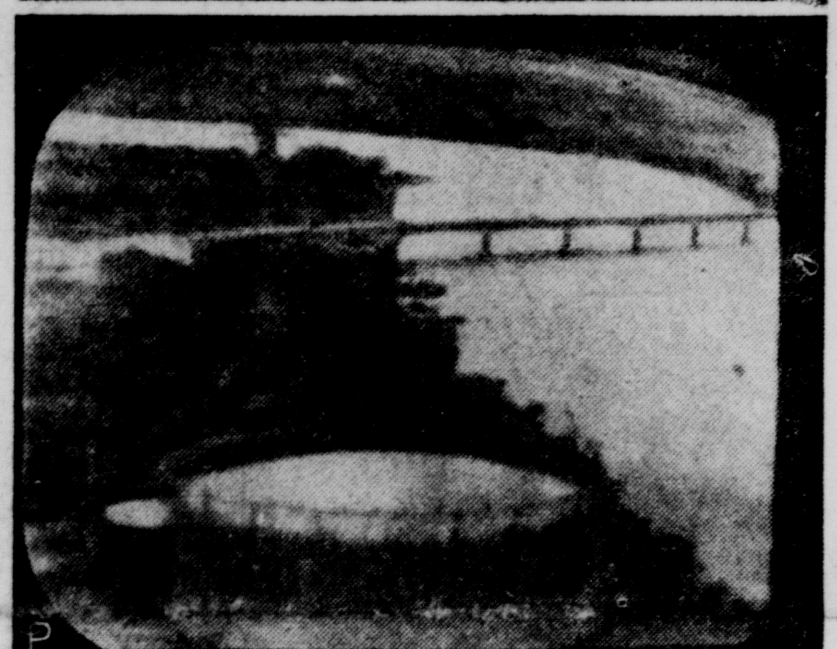

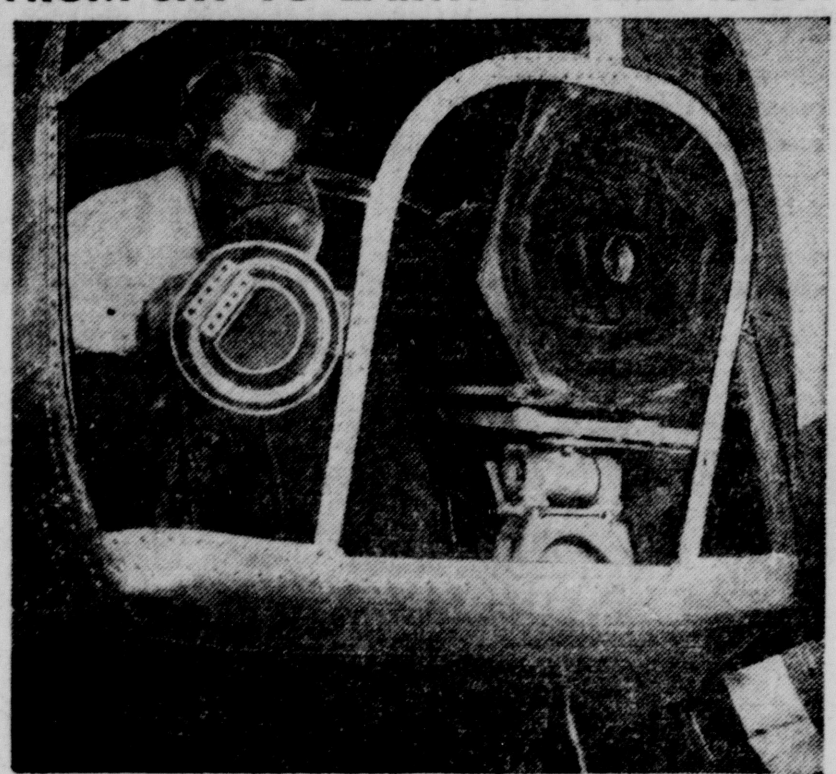

"The old party caucus was a better system than dictation from a few top leaders," Overton said. "But after all you can never take away from a congressman his right to vote as he wants."

Some Democrats were reported to have boycotted the dinner because of Wallace's place on the speaker's platform. Wallace, the party's chief link with the New Deal, angered southerners earlier last week when he suggested a virtual "purge" of Democrats who consistently refused to vote for important administration bills.

Wallace Tempers Charge
The southerners noted that Mr. Truman avoided any such proposal and that Wallace himself did not repeat it at the Jackson Day gathering. Wallace nevertheless did criticize Democrats who rejected administration wills with regularity.

The Democratic party, he said, had been "done great harm" by those who wrap themselves with the traditions of Jefferson and

Outlaw Strikes For Year,
Hike Output, Says Baruch

WASHINGTON, March 25—Elder Statesman Bernard Baruch told Congress today that strikes and lockouts must be prevented for at least a year—by law if necessary—so production can reach the high levels needed to lick inflation.

At the same time, he called for creation of a high court of commerce, "a sort of supreme economic council," to help settle clashes between all segments of the national economy.

"If this is not done," Baruch warned, "we shall soon find ourselves in the morass of confusion that will bring us either to Fascism or Communism; and human liberties and dignities, our form of government, will have been lost."

In blunt and forthright language, the 75-year-old financier and adviser to Presidents, said labor, industry, farmers, politicians and other groups must accept the bitter with the sweet if they want to check the "grave break" in the stabilization line.

He told the House banking committee he was in favor of the pending bill to extend price controls for another year after June 30. But he warned that OPA was only one part of the broad anti-inflation program that was needed.

"Price control by itself will not be effective," he said. "It must go

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 25—The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration today was reported resisting the back-to-rationing food conservation proposal of its retiring director general Herbert H. Lehman.

Instead, the food policy subcommittee of the UNRRA conference here was said to favor an urgent appeal for all nations to conserve food as best they know how.

The food group is expected to complete its closed sessions today on recommendations to UNRRA aimed at getting the most food for the 500,000,000 starving people of the world.

Political And Oil Treaties Believed Acquired By Soviet Negotiations

LONDON, March 25—The Red Army was withdrawing from Iran today while the world speculated on what concessions the Tehran government made to bring about the evacuation.

In words almost identical to the official Russian announcement, an Iranian government spokesman announced that the withdrawal was under way. He said it would be completed, barring unexpected developments, in five weeks. That means approximately May 1, almost two months after the withdrawal date set by the Anglo-Soviet-Iranian treaty of 1942.

Russians Act Quickly
Once they decided on the move, the Russians apparently were withdrawing quickly. The Iranian spokesman, Prince Mozaffar Firouz, said in Tehran the Red Army already had left Keraj, approximately 20 miles northwest of Tehran and their closest occupation point to the capital.

The Russians also were pulling out of Kazvin, once a major transshipment point for American lend-lease supplies to Russia, he said.

Informed London sources believed, without official confirmation, that Iran had acceded to Soviet demands for oil and political concessions before the Russian evacuation began. The British government had received no reply of any sort to its repeated queries and protests to Moscow over Russia.

Thomas And Reuther Clash
At "Peace" Convention;
Delegates Calm

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 25—The campaign for the presidency of the nation's largest union—the CIO United Auto Workers—exploded today with bitter charges of "liar," "Communist line" and "phony" exchanged by R. H. Thomas, incumbent, and Walter P. Reuther, red-haired vice president.

Both candidates addressed the 2,300 delegates attending the national convention which is expected to restore peace between the two factions.

Prayed nerves from the General Motors strike were exposed last night when Thomas accused Reuther of calling the GM strike without consultation with the national union. He said if elected to the UAW presidency, he would only be a "dupe" of those trying to take the UAW back into the American Federation of Labor.

Reuther replied, point by point, within a matter of minutes, claiming that Thomas was following the Communist line "that The Daily Worker has been running for a year."

Delegates for the most part took the charges and counter charges calmly.

They approved a resolution calling on state legislatures to pass equal pay for equal work laws to give women an equal opportunity in industry.

Ultra-Secret Military Discussions
To Chart World "Police Force"

NEW YORK, March 25—The United Nations military staff committee begins its ultra-secret discussions tomorrow on the size and make-up of the international armed forces that will provide the bite to back up the UNO security council's bark.

The discussions will range all the way from the use of the atomic bomb to the kind of equipment to be provided for the men of the fighting forces to be allocated by UNO member states to help the security council maintain the peace. The meeting was scheduled to start today but some of the officers were late in arriving and it was put off until tomorrow.

Strike Deadline Is Only Week
Away; Walkout Inevitable,
Operators Believe

WASHINGTON, March 25—Negotiations between John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers (AFL) and the soft coal industry resume today with a threatened nationwide walkout only a week away.

The approach of the strike deadline subjected representatives of the industry to mounting pressure to agree on an offer to meet the union's nine-point set of bargaining proposals.

Mine operators believed a strike of the 400,000 soft coal miners next Monday was inevitable, and some said reports from the coal field indicated it might last a month or two. It also seemed inevitable, however, that the threat of a strike of that duration would bring government intervention.

The operators' negotiating committee held two long sessions yesterday and reportedly made some progress in efforts to draft an offer to the union. The management group wanted to submit a proposition to Lewis by tomorrow, before he served notice to terminate the present contract.

Operators expected Lewis to serve that notice tomorrow or Wednesday under a contract provision allowing either party to do so 15 days after the wage conference opened.

The contract expires five days after the notice, and the miners do not work without a contract.

achievement with ground, naval and air forces.

Meeting in a tightly-guarded room of mid-town Henry Hudson hotel—almost eight miles from Hunter College in the Bronx, where the security council is holding its first public session in the United States—the military brass hats will first take up their agenda.

Topping the agenda is the big job assigned it by the United Nations Charter—development of the international fighting force that must be at the beck and call of the security council.

Preliminaries At Start
At first, a high official on the committee said, the group will engage in preliminary discussions and in the most general terms. Under the charter, not all of the 51 United Nations will be required to provide actual fighting forces. Some of them will be expected to provide other forms of assistance and facilities, including rights of passage through their territories, when necessary to maintain the peace.

A high-ranking staff member said there have not been and will not be for some time any kind of discussion—informal or otherwise—of the size or composition of the armed forces.

Reminded that at the United Nations conference in San Francisco almost a year ago, there had been some suggestions in naval quarters that the United States might consider allocation of approximately one-third of the fleet to the world force, the official

CHETNIK LEADER
AND COMRADES
SEIZED BY TITO

BELGRADE, March 25—Gen. Draza Mikhailovich, Yugoslavia's wartime Chetnik leader, was arrested March 13 along with 11 of his comrades and is now in the hands of Marshal Tito's government, according to Gen. Alexander Rankovic, minister of the interior.

He was delivered a four-point peace "intention" from Adolf Hitler to the British government when he parachuted into Scotland in May, 1941, his defense attorney told the war crimes tribunal today.

Attorney Rudolf Seidl said that Hess talked to Viscount Simon, then Lord Chancellor, and Ivone Kirkpatrick of the Foreign Office shortly after he landed and gave them the grounds on which Hitler would make peace.

They were:

- (1) A definition of spheres of influence, giving Europe to the Axis and letting Britain retain her empire.
- (2) Return of the German colonies taken from her after World War I.
- (3) Mutual indemnification of German and British nationals in each other's territory.
- (4) Simultaneously peace with Italy.

Hess was agitated and vigorously nudged Hermann Goering while Seidl spoke.

U. S. TO INSIST

OF IRAN PACT

Tehran Confirms Withdrawal
Of Soviet Troops, End
Of Big Dispute

NEW YORK, March 25—The United Nations security council met for the first time in its new American home today, with the United States ready to insist upon full discussion and council ratification of any Soviet-Iranian settlement of their dispute.

Tehran announced that Russia had begun withdrawing her troops from Iran, but regardless of what action the Russians have taken, they must outline their full intentions before the 11-nation UNO security council and the world to satisfy Secretary of State James F. Byrnes.

Optimistic Air Pervades
But when council President Dr. Quo Tai-Chi of China called the council to order at 2:30 p. m., it was in an international atmosphere changed almost overnight by the Soviet Union from critical pessimism to hopeful optimism.

Byrnes' insistence upon council approval of the agreement is based on article 102 of the charter which requires that parties to international agreements register them with UNO and publish their texts. Otherwise they can never invoke them before any organ of UNO.

Members of the council, including Byrnes, were hopeful that the Soviet-Iranian agreement announced by Radio Moscow less than 24 hours before the council meeting would prove to be a bona fide settlement on which the council can stamp its approval.

Byrnes' Demands
But before the council does that, it was learned that Byrnes will insist:

- 1.—That the council receive a full report from both Iran and the Soviet Union on their negotiations and on details of the settlement.
- 2.—That the Soviet and Iranian reports convince the council members the agreement is an honest one and not one extracted from Iran under duress.
- 3.—That the Soviet Union consider its report to the council tantamount to an agreement with UNO as well as with Iran.

Today's meeting in the Hollywood-like setting into which Hunter College's gymnasium was converted was limited to formalities—the reading of a message from President Truman and short address of welcome by New York Governor Thomas E. Dewey and New York City's Mayor William O'Dwyer.

Iran Is Big Issue
But the eyes and ears of delegates turned toward Iran and Russia. They will be waiting for official confirmation that the three-week controversy has been

CANNING SUGAR
APPEAL SOUNDED
BY OPA CHIEFS

WASHINGTON, March 25—The OPA appealed to housewives today not to go out and buy canning sugar before they have any fruit to can.

So many housewives are doing just that, officials said, that the OPA sugar distribution machinery is in danger of being thrown out of gear.

OPA validated spare stamp No. 9 on March 11 for five pounds of canning sugar. Housewives all over the country immediately began using the stamps—many of them, OPA suspects, for ordinary household use.

Each ration book holder can get sugar for canning purposes—five pounds with spare stamp 9 and five with another stamp to be validated in June or July. So please, said the OPA, don't rush in and use them before you need the sugar.

In addition to the spare, sugar stamp 39 is now good and another will be validated May 1.

William Hill Held In Robbery Of Ellingsworth Home; Loot Recovered

William Hill, 25, of Haywood avenue, an Ohio Penitentiary parolee who is charged with one burglary and is suspected of several others, was in the Pickaway county jail, Monday, awaiting a hearing.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff said that Hill, who was arrested Friday night, is accused of looting the home of Earl Ellingsworth, South Bloomfield, after gaining entrance to the dwelling the night of March 16 by using a skeleton key.

The loot, most of which was recovered by Sheriff Radcliff, Saturday, included a guitar, camera, flashlight, wrist watch, two necklaces, pocket knife, a bracelet, pair of souvenir wooden shoes from the Philippine Islands, and four bus tickets. The sheriff said Hill denied having entered the Ellingsworth home. Total value of the stolen articles was placed at $50 by the sheriff.

U. S. TO INSIST ON EXPLANATION OF IRAN PACT

settled with an honest agreement for removal of Russian troops from Iran.

If the Soviet-Iranian settlement is approved by the council, much of the potential dynamite predicted for the UNO meetings will have been defused.

Iran had been expected to furnish the fireworks of this council meeting. A week ago Byrnes was determined to make it a test case for UNO and for Russian intentions toward the new organization if the Russians failed to get out of Iran.

But late yesterday the Soviet Union pulled the props from under such expectations by announcing over Radio Moscow that her troops already were evacuated from Eastern Iran, that evacuation of other parts of the country started today and that evacuation might be completed within five or six weeks if nothing unforeseen happens.

Today, it was announced officially in Tehran that the withdrawal had begun—but that it would take several weeks to remove all the troops. Prince Mozaffar Firouz, Iranian government spokesman, said the Russians had evacuated Keraz, 20 miles northwest of the Iranian capital. Before the council gets down to real business tomorrow, the Russian, British and Iranian delegations are expected to receive new instructions to cope with the late sensational Soviet development.

The Soviet-Iranian agreement, if approved by the council, will change the entire complexion of these first meetings of the council in its new home. Unless other issues such as Spain and Argentina are tossed in at an early date, the council should be able after disposal of the Iranian case to get off to a leisurely start.

Tension Relaxes
Even Byrnes, who a few days ago when tension over Iran was greatest, was insisting upon immediate council action on that case, was understood now to be willing to move more slowly on that in event official papers and instructions do not arrive quickly from Moscow and Tehran.

The security council—the organ of UNO whose primary responsibility is to maintain international peace and security—started its career in the United States exactly 11 months after the opening of the San Francisco conference which drafted the UNO charter.

The eyes of a war-weary but diplomatically jittery world were upon this new international instrument which started a series of wide-swinging and angry debates over Iran, Greece, Indonesia and the Levant in London during January and February.

Policies Conflict
A week ago it looked as though the New York performance would duplicate or be a continuation of the London sessions. The Soviet Union's policies in many parts of the world were in direct conflict with those of the United States and Britain.

Generalissimo Josef Stalin and former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill were engaging

U. S. WARSHIPS TO TRAIN SOON IN W. ATLANTIC

WASHINGTON, March 25—A task force of American warships will hold training exercises in the western Atlantic soon, probably late this month.

The force will be headed by Adm. Marc A. Mitscher, now commander of the Eighth Fleet in the Atlantic.

The exercises are planned to give new naval personnel some practical experience in task force operations, the Navy said.

in a transoceanic name-calling debate reminiscent of those engaged in between enemies during the war.

But in almost a matter of hours those clouds have been breaking up and the prospects of at least a semblance of harmony among the great powers for the opening council sessions were improved by these developments:

1.—Announcements about removal of Soviet troops from the Danish island of Bjornholm in the Baltic Sea, from Mukden and all of Manchuria, and last but not least from Iran.

2.—Stalin's answer to an American correspondent's question that the Soviet Union considers UNO an important international instrument.

3.—President Truman's decision to postpone the atomic bomb test in the Pacific at least until the council is well underway in its new headquarters.

Satisfactory settlement of the Iranian question, however, does not guarantee the council easy sledding. It is meeting amidst the wreckage of the world's most devastating war—a war that has not only wreaked inestimable physical damage, death and human suffering, but one that has strained to the breaking point old economic, political and social systems.

Continuous Session Begins
Those effects of the war will be reflected for a long time in disputes between nations. But it was for just that purpose that the United Nations met before the war was over and set up an organization designed to cope with such problems and to obtain a settlement before they inflamed the world in another war.

Thus, the security council started today a "continuous session." Henceforth it will be the world's watchdog for preservation of peace and, under its proposed rules, will never be able in the future to recess for more than two weeks.

The security council will get down to real business tomorrow. Its proposed agenda includes reports from a technical committee on council rules of procedure and from its military staff committee which also begins meetings in downtown New York today to plan "teeth" for UNO. But those reports will be deferred for some time and the council will proceed with the Iranian case.

PATERNITY CHARGE FILED
Miss Ida Katherine Buskirk, 20, Darbyville, filed a paternity charge in the court of Justice of the Peace Harold O. Eveland, against Charles Hinton, 17, Darbyville. Hinton was arrested by Constable Harry B. Timmons and was released under $500 bond to await a hearing. A baby was born to Miss Buskirk March 19.

Jackson but whose actions belie their pretensions."

Regarding Wallace's remarks Cox said:

"Wallace is a newcomer to the Democratic party, and to those Democrats who kept the party alive during its day of adversity. His words don't carry much weight."

Truman Appeals To All

Mr. Truman appealed not only to southern Democrats but to Republicans to back his reconversion program in the interests of a "strong and progressive" America.

"The solution of the tremendous social problems of our day should not be a partisan affair," he said, "no one class, group, or party can hope to solve all the complicated problems facing America. Their solution requires the wholehearted cooperation of every element within our great country."

The President departed from the prepared text of his speech to criticize House members who blocked important provisions of the administration's emergency housing bill. A coalition of Republicans and southern Democrats defeated proposals for housing subsidies and for price ceilings on existing homes.

Issue Is Clarified
"My friends in Congress," Mr. Truman said, "have got to make a choice—they've got to make up their minds whether they are for veterans' rights or in favor of the real estate lobby."

Rep. John E. Rankin, D. Miss., foe of many administration bills, took issue with the President on this score.

"Instead of being harassed by 'real-estate lobbyists' against the so-called housing bill," he said, "we really have been besieged on the other side by influences who were not so much interested in the welfare of veterans as they were in unloading on veterans prefabricated housing at prices far in excess of their real value and of having us provide a subsidy out of the federal treasury."

WORLD PONDERES PRICE REDS PUT ON IRAN PEACE

sia's failure to honor the March 2 withdrawal date.

The diplomatic correspondent of The Daily Herald, Labor party newspaper, said it seemed probable that Iran had agreed to Soviet demands for autonomy of the Azerbaijan provincial government, Soviet exploitation of all northern Iran oilfields and a pledge of future Iranian "loyalty" to the Soviet Union.

The Daily Herald predicted that the UNO security council meeting in New York would be asked to accept such a settlement and consider the dispute closed. It appeared that an explanation of the agreement would come from the UNO meeting.

An NBC correspondent broadcasting from Moscow said Iran was expected to recognize the independence of Azerbaijan within the framework of the Iranian state.

Autonomy Declared
The northern province of Iran recently declared itself autonomous. Any Tehran recognition of its autonomy evidently would be linked with negotiations over the withdrawal of Russian forces from Iran.

A British Foreign Office spokesman said it would be "quite premature" to say our anxieties have been relieved with regard to the pressure which might already have been or still might be put on the Iranian government" by Russia.

"We do not yet know the terms of the agreement reported between Russia and Iran," the spokesman observed.

He said the British charge d'affaires at Tehran, H. L. Farquar, had been instructed to inquire about the Soviet-Iranian agreement.

An official Iranian spokesman in London said Russia plainly did not want to face the UNO and be accused of endangering the peace.

A 3-year enlistment in the Regular Army means that you can choose your arm or branch of service and your overseas theater. It means thorough training in one of over 200 skilled trades. And it means that, under the GI Bill of Rights, you will be able to complete your education when your term of enlistment is up. You can get the complete details, without obligation, at your nearest Army Recruiting Station.

Highlights of the Armed Forces Voluntary Recruitment Act

1. Enlistments for 1½, 2 or 3 years. (One-year enlistments permitted for men who have been in the Army six months.)
2. Enlistment age from 18 to 34 years inclusive (17 with parents' consent) except for men now in Army, who may reenlist at any age, and former service men depending on length of service.
3. An increase in the reenlistment bonus to $50 for each year of active service since such bonus was last paid, or since last entry into service.
4. Up to 90 days' paid furlough, depending on length of service, with furlough paid to home and return, for men now in the Army who reenlist.
5. A 30-day furlough every year at full pay.
6. Mustering-out pay (based upon length of service) to all men who are discharged to reenlist.
7. Option to retire at half pay for the rest of your life after 20 years' service—increasing to three-quarters pay after 30 years' service. (Retirement income in grade of Master or First Sergeant up to $155.25 per month for life.) All previous active federal military service counts toward retirement.
8. Benefits under the GI Bill of Rights for men who enlist before October 6, 1946.
9. Family allowances for the term of enlistment for dependents of men who enlist or reenlist before July 1, 1946.
10. Choice of branch of service and overseas theater on 3-year enlistments.
11. Reserve and A. U. S. commissioned officers released from active duty may be enlisted in Grade 1 (Master Sergeant) and still retain their reserve commissions.

A 3-year enlistment in the Regular Army means that you can choose your arm or branch of service and your overseas theater. It means thorough training in one of over 200 skilled trades. And it means that, under the GI Bill of Rights, you will be able to complete your education when your term of enlistment is up. You can get the complete details, without obligation, at your nearest Army Recruiting Station.
Highlights of the Armed Forces Voluntary Recruitment Act
1. Enlistments for 1½, 2 or 3 years. (One-year enlistments permitted for men who have been in the Army six months.)
2. Enlistment age from 18 to 34 years inclusive (17 with parents' consent) except for men now in Army, who may reenlist at any age, and former service men depending on length of service.
3. An increase in the reenlistment bonus to $50 for each year of active service since such bonus was last paid, or since last entry into service.
4. Up to 90 days' paid furlough, depending on length of service, with furlough paid for home and return, for men now in the Army who reenlist.
5. A 30-day furlough every year at full pay.
6. Mustering-out pay (based upon length of service) to all men who are discharged to reenlist.
7. Option to retire at half pay for the rest of your life after 20 years' service—increasing to three-quarters pay after 30 years' service. (Retirement income in grade of Master or First Sergeant up to $155.25 per month for life.) All previous active federal military service counts toward retirement.
8. Benefits under the GI Bill of Rights for men who enlist before October 6, 1946.
9. Family allowances for the term of enlistment for dependents of men who enlist or reenlist before July 1, 1946.
10. Choice of branch of service and overseas theater on 3-year enlistments.
11. Reserve and A. U. S. commissioned officers released from active duty may be enlisted in Grade 1 (Master Sergeant) and still retain their reserve commissions.

N. & W. OFFERS $500 FOR NAME FOR NEW TRAIN

Luxury Streamliner Will Ply Between Cincinnati And Norfolk

ROANOKE, Va., March 25—A fast all-coach, luxury train, operating between Norfolk and Cincinnati on a schedule which reduces the Norfolk and Western's fastest running time between the two terminals by an average of three and one-half hours, will be placed in service in the near future, officials of the railway announced today.

At the same time, announcement was made of a contest to name the train, in which the railroad will offer a total of $750 in cash prizes—$500 for the best name submitted and $25 each for the ten next best.

Daylight Schedule

Operating on a daylight schedule as a reserved seat coach train, the streamliner will make the run between Norfolk and Cincinnati in approximately 15 hours. The westbound train, No. 25, will leave Norfolk at 7:30 a. m. and arrive in Cincinnati at 11:15 p. m. Eastbound, No. 26, will depart from Cincinnati at 8:00 a. m. and reach Norfolk at 11:45 p. m.

In announcing the operation of the newly designed train between the Midwest and the Atlantic Seacoast, N. & W. officials said "this new faster passenger train is in line with the railroad's postwar program of providing improved service and facilities."

Equipment for each of the new trains will include powerful, sleek streamlined Class J steam locomotives; five handsomely appointed airconditioned coaches; an attractive tavern lounge; and a tastefully appointed dining car.

Pastel Interiors

Interior color schemes will be harmonizing pastel shades of blue, emphasized by chrome trim. Adjustable roomy seats, richly upholstered; individual seat lights and overall indirect fluorescent lighting; rubber tile flooring; wide plate glass windows; large full color photo-murals; and up to the minute commodious smoking and wash rooms are featured in all coaches.

The train name contest opens on March 24 and closes at midnight, March 30. The contest is open to everyone except officers of the Norfolk and Western, their staffs and members of their families.

Entry blanks will be contained in a series of newspaper advertisements, listing rules and other pertinent information about the train and the territory between Norfolk and Cincinnati. Winners in the contest will be announced about a week or 10 days after it closes.

PLAN HOME IMPROVEMENTS

OKLAHOMA CITY—Home owners on farms and in communities of less than 2,500 population in Oklahoma will spend an estimated $31,220,000 by the end of 1950 to improve present electric services and home plumbing, according to a survey reported here.

ASHVILLE

Beginning at 6:30 p. m. Monday, a banquet meeting of the Ashville Community Club will be held in the basement of the Methodist Church. Among business matters to be transacted are the annual collection of dues and appointment of committees for the July Fourth Celebration.

Senior members of the Ashville basketball squad include Charles Pettibone, Bill Speakman, James

Woodworth, Jack Irwin, Dale Schiff, Bill Courtright, Herbert Hoover, John Hicks, and Don Hoover; all of whom played on the varsity this season. The boys point out that by comparative scores they were one point better than Farmer, the state class B champs, since Ashville's winning margin over Worthington was one point greater than Farmer's in the state finals.

Certain specialists who received their training and experience in the Army during the war, have left the service. The Army urgently needs CERTAIN of these men.

THEREFORE *****

The War Department authorized the following procedure in the re-enlistment of these specialists even if they are over their 3 months re-enlistment period.

It outlines the 378 critically needed specialists and sets up a table to judge their experience in that MOS (Military Occupational Specialty).

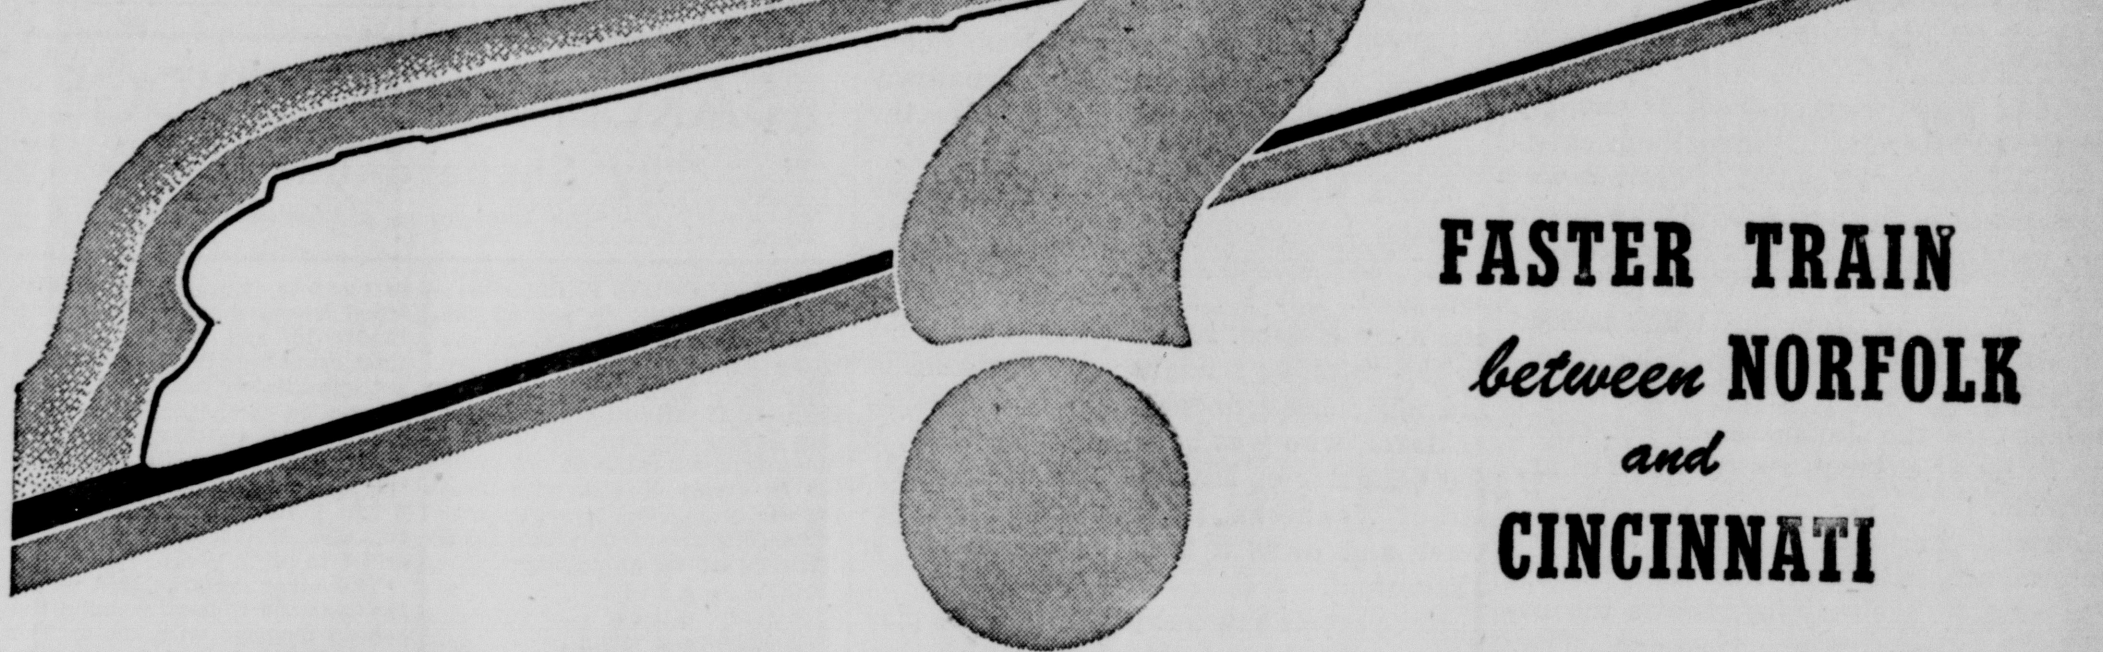

It authorizes the enlistment of these specialists in the grade for which they are qualified, if they have been discharged between 12 May 1945 and 30 June 1946.

AMERICANIZATION

JOHN Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" was played in a Tokyo theater by a Japanese troupe in an unprecedented effort at Americanization. Overcoming many difficulties of translation and inherited traditional stage technique, Lincoln emerged a creditable performance, and the audience, night after night, gave quiet attention. Historical and background information was given before each act, for which a large map of the United States was used, notable for its inaccuracies.

Several states were omitted, or wrongly located, and there were misspellings chiefly involving the "I" and "r"; Florida was Furorida; Oklahoma was Ohkwrhoma Ohio was Ohrio. The actors followed their training in "freezing" when a fellow actor spoke, in bowing from the waist instead of nodding and in waving their hands before their faces for a "no." There was no applause, as the Japanese do not either clap hands or cheer in appreciation of any spectacle.

Despite what must have been a halting performance, the fact that they would even attempt such a play, shows the nation's great powers of adjustment. They have been a people who easily learned to copy. Unfortunately in the past they followed the design of war set by the Occident. Perhaps now they will follow the lead of peace—if the Occident can itself set up such a pattern.

HONORING THE POTATO

THE humble Irish potato comes into new respect with the slogan suggested by the Department of Agriculture's save-the-wheat program: "Reach for a potato instead of more bread." The potato, it seems, isn't Irish at all, but Spanish, in origin. A sixteenth century monk is supposed to have introduced it from Peru into Spain. His name was Cardan, and it is set down here, for he deserves more recognition than he's had.

At about the same time, colonists under Sir Walter Raleigh found the tubers growing in what is now North Carolina, and brought some of them back to Raleigh's estate in Cork where the good gentleman who was also busy getting the tobacco habit planted among Europeans, gave orders that the potato be carefully cultivated. Those first potatoes were the size of walnuts were eaten roasted, Indian fashion.

Europeans were immediately enthusiastic about the potato, and it looks as if Americans were going to develop new enthusiasm for it, in order that the descendants of those Europeans may have more wheat to eat.

The "bar that walks like a man" is standing up straighter than usual just now, and growling more fiercely. But that doesn't necessarily mean that he has any intention of eating us up.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK, March 25—The program note on Wisconsin's Miss Mardi Bryant was interesting, so I went backstage at the Golden Theater after her opening in "I Like It Here." It said that she was the rarity, a small town girl who got a Broadway role the day she arrived in New York.

It developed that the program information wasn't exactly wrong, but that some pertinent details had been omitted with the result that her accomplishment wasn't quite as startling as it was made to appear.

"I did get a call to audition for this play the day I arrived from my home in Waukesha in January," Miss Bryant said. "But I wasn't just arriving here for the first time. I was simply coming back after spending the Christmas holidays at home. I had been in New York almost a year trying to get a break. A friend of mine had recommended me to the producer."

Even so, Miss Bryant's accomplishment is not to be sneezed at. She acquired the ingenue lead in a play in a year's time, without a previous Broadway role, and there are plenty of pretty and no doubt talented girls pounding the Broadway pavement who wish they could make the same kind of progress.

"As a matter of fact, it was a tossup whether I was coming back after Christmas," Miss Bryant said. "I was pretty discouraged. But I finally decided to take one more chance. And I brought back my guitar, thinking I might get some kind of a singing engagement."

Mardi, who was born on Mardi Gras, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bryant of Waukesha. He is a fence manufacturer and owns a tung oil plantation in Mississippi.

Her parents saw her perform in the play when it was trying out in Detroit, so they didn't come for the opening. However, two aunts showed up.

The girl, a brunette, is a graduate of Lawrence College at Appleton, Wis., and has had some summer stock company work for her only theatrical background.

In "I Like It Here" she plays the daughter of a college professor who is under his wife's thumb until the family acquires a hired hand whose friendliness and homely philosophy effect a change in the setup, including the daughter's romance.

Oscar Karlweis, the former Viennese star, and Bert Lytell, president of Actors Equity Association, have the most important roles and carry the play on their capable shoulders.

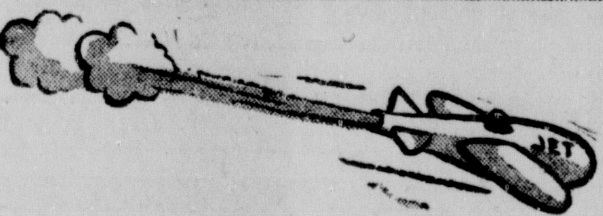

Playing the wife and mother is Beverly Bayne, the great heroine of the long-ago silent film days when she and Francis X. Bushman were the top romantic team of the screen. A. B. Shiffrin is the author and William Cahn the producer.

SOMALILAND PUZZLE

A country almost all dessert and terrifically hot does not sound worth coveting. Yet before the war Great Britain, France and Italy divided up between them Somaliland, on the Red Sea below Egypt. The attraction was the harbors, not very good but better than nothing. There may also have been thought of the future, when Ethiopia, lying inland, will need an outlet to the sea.

Now the question arises, what shall become of Somaliland? Italy, as an enemy power and one whose treatment of the natives made her very unpopular, will probably be ruled out. The probable solution is a trusteeship of the United Nations, in which Ethiopia, as well as Great Britain and France, will have a hand.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THIRTEENERS PERILOUS

ATTEMPTING to set up the thirteen of a suit in which you have four cards opposite three may be a perilous adventure if you try it early in the play of a No Trump contract. In case the defenders' six cards do not prove to be evenly divided, with three apiece, your effort to set up your own fourth card only sets up a fourth-card for an opponent.

♠ 7 4 2	♥ 9	♦ 9	♣ 9

That bidding varied somewhat at the tables of a duplicate game, and so did the play. Emphatically different it was at two tables where South played for 3-No Trumps and West led the K of his partner's suit. One declarer, optimistically taking everything possible for granted, was beaten two tricks, whereas the other, by means of two simple safety plays, made the contract.

The optimist's first mistake was in taking the heart K lead with the A. He led to the diamond K, then offered the spade J. The Q and A covered. Then he led the spade 3 to the 10 and brought back the 5 to the K, hoping that would set up his 6, but it only established West's 8 instead. Next he went to dummy with the diamond A—which, of course, set up East's 10—and led the club K. East came in with the A, and did not immediately cash his diamond 10; he led the heart J. Dummy's Q won that, and then the club 5 was led to finesse the 10. When the J won, West cashed his spade 8 and led to the diamond 10, so that East then scored the heart 10 and 7 to set it two.

The other declarer held up on the diamond K lead, winning the second diamond with the Q. The spade J-Q-A trick followed, then the club K to the A. The heart J went to the A, the spade 10 was scored, then the club 10 finessed to the J. West led a spade back to the A. Then the diamond A and K and the club Q and 9 completed the game for that declarer, the spade 6 being given up to West's 8 for the last trick. By not taking the first heart, not setting up the spade 8 early and not setting up the diamond 10 as a re-entry for East's hearts, he had played it safe all the way.

SYNOPSIS

It all began when Jane Applebee, hired agent, was week-ending at Elmpoint, the new country estate of her married sister, Dita Pearce. Their older sister, Neal Tarrant, the famous actress, had recently arrived from abroad, and Jane regretted having invited her to share her New York apartment. Neal always took what she wanted, and in this instance it was Jane's close friend and client, Deane Kennard, rising young novelist. Elmpoint had been purchased complete with furnishings, and Dita, soon in need of a nursery, had given the lush fittings of one of its boudoirs to Neal for her room in Jane's apartment. Attractive Dr. Hunt Berwick, amateur criminologist and was buddy of Dita's husband, Dick, was also a week-end guest, and Jane invited him to a reception she was giving the following Wednesday for Margot Case-Ingalls, her most important author. Jane is telling the story.

CHAPTER THREE

HUNT SEEMED genuinely interested, not so much in me as in my occupation and my life among authors and publishers. Besides, the fact that I was the sister of the famous Neal Tarrant, and that she was going to share my apartment with me, intrigued him no end. It is an indisputable fact that, once you start talking to Neal you don't stop. This evening was no exception. We kept chatting about her. Her career, her looks, her ways. Until, as we were turning at the end of the terrace Dick stopped short and peered into the dark grounds.

"Why—I think there's someone coming up the driveway," he said uncertainly. "Now, who the dickens—"

He stepped to the door of the drawing room and turned on the floodlights. The wide road under the elms sprang vividly into view and on it, advancing toward the house with a slight limp, was the figure of a young woman.

We stared at her as if she were a ghost and then glanced at each other for the enlightenment none of us could give.

"I beg your pardon, is this the Grosvenor?" she called faintly from the grounds.

Dick ran down the terrace steps. "The Grosvenor's ten miles up the coast. This is a private residence," he informed the late wanderer.

She stood still and I could see, even at this distance, that she looked exhausted. "Oh, that's dreadful! I thought I'd found it at last," she said in a curiously breathless voice.

"I'm sorry, you haven't. Won't you come in and rest a while?" Dick invited.

"Thank you. If I may? I've been walking for hours and hours," she said in brief gasps as Dick helped her up the steps. And then sank into the first chair—a small iron one—with a long drawn sigh of relief.

Our late visitor was very lovely, in spite of her exhaustion and definitely disheveled state. She was about my age, or a little older, I judged, and a decidedly Nordic type. With silvery blond, smooth hair and huge dark gray eyes staring out of a delicately molded, almost doll-like face that, at present, looked incredibly tired. She was dressed in faultlessly tailored soft-tweed, topped by at least six sables carelessly flung around her shoulders, and on the lapel of her jacket gleamed a diamond rose that doubtless was the real thing. But her cobwebby stockings—nylons, I could have sworn—were a mass of runs and the spike heels of her smart lizard pumps were worn to the wood.

"It was so lovely when I got off the train I thought I'd walk to the hotel," she explained in her breathless way. "I asked the driver they'd sent which was a pretty road, when I gave him my bags, but I must have misunderstood his directions."

"You mean you came on the six fifty-five and have been walking ever since?" Dick asked, appalled. She nodded. "Yes. The man said it would be a good half hour, but the road turned and—it became quite wild—all thick woods. And the houses I did find were shuttered and closed."

"And you've had nothing to eat and are starved," I said, taking over for my sister after a mute exchange of glances with Dick. "Better come inside and sit down on a more comfortable chair, while I go raid the ice box for you."

She was hardly able to get up from her hard seat. "Thank you. You are terribly kind, Mrs.—" she murmured as Dick propelled her into the house.

"Miss Applebee," I corrected. "This is your host, Mr. Pearce. I'm Mrs. Pearce's sister, and she has already gone to bed. This is another house guest, Dr. Hunt Berwick."

"My name is Knight. Mrs. Brenda Knight," she returned in introduction, sinking gratefully into the corner of a soft couch, while I turned kitchenward, followed by Hunt, who had been a silent spectator so far.

"I don't like her looks," he whispered to me the moment we were out of the room.

I stopped and gaped at him. "You don't? But she's a ravine beauty!" He made an impatient gesture.

"But her beauty, I mean—she looks as if something were wrong." "Of course there is. She's hungry and needs food," I told him practically. He shrugged and said, "Hope you're right and it's nothing worse," and went back into the drawing room.

I walked on to the kitchen and started to forage in the pantry. I had just finished arranging an appetizing assortment of cold cuts and a steaming cup of hot broth on a tray when Dick burst in, white around the gills and positively jittering with fear.

"She's fainted," he jabbered at me. "She passed out just as I was taking her a drink. Hunt's working on her, but I dunno—she looks dead to me!"

I thrust my tray into his hands. "Don't be a jackass," I scolded him. "She's fainted with hunger, that's all. Just you bring her this."

She'll be all right, once she's eaten."

When we arrived in the drawing room a part of my prediction had already come true. Brenda Knight was conscious again. She was lying on the big couch, her feet propped up with pillows, and Hunt was chafing her wrists.

He nodded approval after inspecting the tray, and I sat down and fed her the broth with a spoon. The food did the trick. A little color returned to her white cheeks and she sat up. But her nerves remained jangled and she began to cry.

"I'm so frightfully sorry to give all this trouble," she gasped out between sobs. "I don't know how I can ever repay all your kindness. Please let me ring up the hotel and ask them to come for me."

Hunt and Dick had been talking in low tones in a corner while our guest was eating. Now Dick came over to the couch.

"We think it would be much better if you stayed here for the night," he pronounced gravely. "It's no trouble at all. There are any number of rooms. Jane, you'll take Mrs. Knight upstairs, won't you?"

I had had the same idea. "Gladly," I smiled at the uninvited guest. "I'll put you in a room near mine, and get you all you need for the night."

"But the hotel!" she protested weakly. "It's terribly kind of you only—may I wonder what has become of me?"

"That's so. They'll have the state troopers out for you," Dick assented with a grin. "I'd better give them a ring."

"It's okay. I got them just in time," he called up to us a few minutes later, when we were mounting the stairs. "They were going to notify the police in another ten minutes."

Upstairs I ushered my charge into the room opposite mine and then left her for a while, to return with a toothbrush and comb from the guest supply closet, and pajamas, a dressing gown and stockings of my own.

Mrs. Knight had discarded her tweeds and sat on the edge of her bed in a lacy slip, her pale hair cascading halfway down her back. I saw that great big tears were silently coursing down her cheeks.

Aunt Jane had discarded her tweeds and sat on the edge of her bed in a lacy slip, her pale hair cascading halfway down her back. I saw that great big tears were silently coursing down her cheeks.

Aunt Jane had brushed her eyes with a quick motion of her hand that released bundles of rays from a large diamond on her third finger. "I'm a fool," she told me, unnecessarily. "It's probably because I'm all in, but—your kindness makes me cry."

I said a few polite things, deposited the things I'd brought in their proper places, and fled.

Aunt Jane has imbued me with a healthy distaste for personal dramatics, and the weeping-willow attitude of our wandering lady seemed somewhat exaggerated to me. A touch of humor really would have been much more helpful in the situation.

Getting into and out of those pre-war cars qualified any veteran motorist as a highly competent contortionist.

The callouses on his head, says Zadok Dumkopf, furnished an excellent relief map of the chuck holes in the roads he had traveled.

In some of those pre-war jobs a six-foot driver had to crouch over the wheel until he looked remarkably like old Uncle Abner milking the spotted Holstein.

Grandpappy Jenkins says he has cracked his noggin on his car ceiling so often that the top now has a cupola in it that fits his head like a skull cap.

Over-Sensitivity to Salicylates

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

IT HAS often been said that one man's meat is another man's poison and the same thing is true of medical drugs.

Some people, for instance, are over-sensitive even to such a commonly used drug as aspirin, or preparations like aspirin, known as salicylates. Taking of these drugs even in moderate doses by such sensitive individuals may result in a condition known as salicylism, which is, in reality, a kind of poisoning.

Habitual Pain-Relievers
Some persons, too, may develop the same disorder from the habitual taking of such preparations to relieve any and every ache or pain, often in large doses. This is bad business for two reasons: First, because these people may be suffering from an ailment which requires real treatment and second, because salicylism is no joke.

The most common symptom of salicylism is ringing in the ears. Other symptoms which occur often are dizziness, sickness to the stomach, and vomiting. Sometimes, there are fever, rapid breathing and mental disturbances.

The sickness to the stomach and vomiting is not due to the effect of the salicylate on the lining membrane of the stomach but, according to Drs. Charles J. Caravati and Clarence B. Whims of the M.C.A.U.S., come from the action of the drugs on the nervous system. This is proven by the fact that these symptoms occur whether salicylates are given by injection into a vein or taken by mouth.

Large Doses
Salicylates are often given in large doses in the treatment of rheumatic fever, a condition which causes pain and swelling of the joints, fever and, sometimes, damage to the heart. When such treatment is carried out, the patient must be carefully watched to make sure that salicylism does not develop. If it does, prompt treatment should be carried out.

If the salicylism is severe, mental excitement, confusion and delirium may develop. The patient is restless and speaks incoherently and occasionally is manic. These first symptoms of stimulation of the nervous system are followed by depression and unconsciousness.

According to Drs. Caravati and Whims, the treatment for salicylism consists in discontinuing the use of the salicylates, giving large doses of some alkaline substance such as baking soda and giving plenty of fluids, both by injection and by mouth, using methods to reduce fever, giving plenty of food and such drugs as caffeine or ephedrine if there is severe depression of the nervous system.

Salicylates are very useful drugs, when properly used. Nonetheless, they may prove dangerous when taken indiscriminately and in over-large quantities. Hence they should be taken only when prescribed by a physician, a man who understands both their uses and their dangers.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
N. R.: I am a woman thirty-five years of age. My legs turn a dark red color on the front and sides. At times, there is itching. What causes this?

Answer: The condition you describe may be due to some trouble with your circulation, vitamin deficiency or to some type of skin disease. It would appear advisable to consult a skin specialist so that the exact cause may be determined.

Impossible to Keep Atomic Bomb Secret, Says Scientist

Hoover to Make Food Tour Of Europe Without Newsmen

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—William Higginbotham, chairman of the Federation of American Scientists, insists that atom bomb secrets cannot be kept.

Higginbotham asserts: "No FBI and no Army vigilance can keep the world from finding out what we know. Our secrets are leaking out at the rate of so many protons a second from every cyclotron in the world. "They are being revealed wherever nature of the world is studied by any scientist of any nationality. American, Canadian, Russian or Chinese."

The atom expert insists, therefore, that rigid international controls must be worked out now. He contends that a policy of secrecy "only slightly postpones the day of reckoning, until other nations are making atom bombs."

Higginbotham and fellow scientists believe the whole concept of military security should be re-examined in the light of total scientific warfare. He points out that American scientists already have pretty well calculated what the results of the forthcoming atom bomb tests in the Marshall Islands will be and that "scientists in other countries can also calculate."

The scientist argues that "the No. 1 secret which should be bared is the answer to the question: 'What kind of world order must we have to save civilization?' " He insists that in that answer lies the best—perhaps the only—defense against the dread power of the atomic bomb.

Washington.

HERBERT HOOVER, honorary chairman of President Truman's famine emergency committee, will make his inspection of starving Europe without being accompanied by members of the United States press. He stood firm by this decision, despite high administration pressure to take at least three leading correspondents with him.

Instead, Hoover is taking only his old cronies of the World War I food relief program and a single representative of the agriculture department. Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson reminded Hoover, before the latter made his "no press" decision, that much of the success of the program to induce Americans voluntarily to reduce their rations depends on the publicity given the famine emergency.

Anderson told Hoover flatly that "we feel it is highly important for you to take reporters from the three press associations so we can have daily stories of the progress and findings of your trip through Europe."

He even offered to supply Hoover with a larger plane so that correspondents could travel right with him. But Hoover remained adamant.

IN THESE DAYS OF DEBATE over Army-Navy preferences for academy trained men, some critics of Navy brass cite this incident: Hardboiled, austere Adm. Ernest J. King—before he became chief of naval operations—was called on to present, in formal ceremonies, a decoration to an ensign who had distinguished himself as a Navy aviator.

The youth appeared smartly in King's office in a stiffly starched and creased white uniform. He was evidently embarrassed and overawed. King, equally stiff and unsmiling, read the citation. The ensign bent backward at attention, in the best Navy tradition.

AMERICANIZATION

JOHN Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" was played in a Tokyo theater by a Japanese troupe in an unprecedented effort at Americanization. Overcoming many difficulties of translation and inherited traditional stage technique, Lincoln emerged a creditable performance, and the audience, night after night, gave quiet attention. Historical and background information was given before each act, for which a large map of the United States was used, notable for its inaccuracies.

Several states were omitted, or wrongly located, and there were misspellings chiefly involving the "I" and "r"; Florida was Furorida; Oklahoma was Ohkwhoma Ohio was Ohirio. The actors followed their training in "freezing" when a fellow actor spoke, in bowing from the waist instead of nodding and in waving their hands before their faces for a "no." There was no applause, as the Japanese do not either clap hands or cheer in appreciation of any spectacle.

Despite what must have been a halting performance, the fact that they would even attempt such a play, shows the nation's great powers of adjustment. They have been a people who easily learned to copy. Unfortunately in the past they followed the design of war set by the Occident. Perhaps now they will follow the lead of peace—if the Occident can itself set up such a pattern.

HONORING THE POTATO

THE humble Irish potato comes into new respect with the slogan suggested by the Department of Agriculture's save-the-wheat program: "Reach for a potato instead of more bread." The potato, it seems, isn't Irish at all, but Spanish, in origin. A sixteenth century monk is supposed to have introduced it from Peru into Spain. His name was Cardan, and it is set down here, for he deserves more recognition than he's had.

At about the same time, colonists under Sir Walter Raleigh found the tubers growing in what is now North Carolina, and brought some of them back to Raleigh's estate in Cork where the good gentleman who was also busy getting the tobacco habit planted among Europeans, gave orders that the potato be carefully cultivated. Those first potatoes were the size of walnuts were eaten roasted, Indian fashion.

Europeans were immediately enthusiastic about the potato, and it looks as if Americans were going to develop new enthusiasm for it, in order that the descendants of those Europeans may have more wheat to eat.

The "bear that walks like a man" is standing up straighter than usual just now, and growling more fiercely. But that doesn't necessarily mean that he has any intention of eating us up.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK, March 25—The program note on Wisconsin's Miss Mardi Bryant was interesting, so I went backstage at the Golden Theater after her opening in "I Like It Here." It said that she was the rarity, a small town girl who got a Broadway role the day she arrived in New York.

It developed that the program information wasn't exactly wrong, but that some pertinent details had been omitted with the result that her accomplishment wasn't quite as startling as it was made to appear. "I did get a call to audition for this play the day I arrived from my home in Waukesha in January," Miss Bryant said. "But I wasn't just arriving here for the first time. I was simply coming back after spending the Christmas holidays at home. I had been in New York almost a year trying to get a break. A friend of mine had recommended me to the producer."

Even so, Miss Bryant's accomplishment is not to be sneezed at. She acquired the ingenue lead in a play in a year's time, without a previous Broadway role, and there are plenty of pretty and no doubt talented girls pounding the Broadway pavement who wish they could make the same kind of progress.

"As a matter of fact, it was a tossup whether I was coming back after Christmas," Miss Bryant said. "I was pretty discouraged. But I finally decided to take one more chance. And I brought back my guitar, thinking I might get some kind of a singing engagement."

Mardi, who was born on Mardi Gras, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bryant of Waukesha. He is a fence manufacturer and owns a tung oil plantation in Mississippi.

Her parents saw her perform in the play when it was trying out in Detroit, so they didn't come for the opening. However, two aunts showed up.

The girl, a brunette, is a graduate of Lawrence College at Appleton, Wis., and has had some summer stock company work for her only theatrical background.

In "I Like It Here" she plays the daughter of a college professor who is under his wife's thumb until the family acquires a hired hand whose friendliness and homely philosophy effect a change in the setup, including the daughter's romance.

Oscar Karlweis, the former Viennese star, and Bert Lytell, president of Actors Equity Association, have the most important roles and carry the play on their capable shoulders.

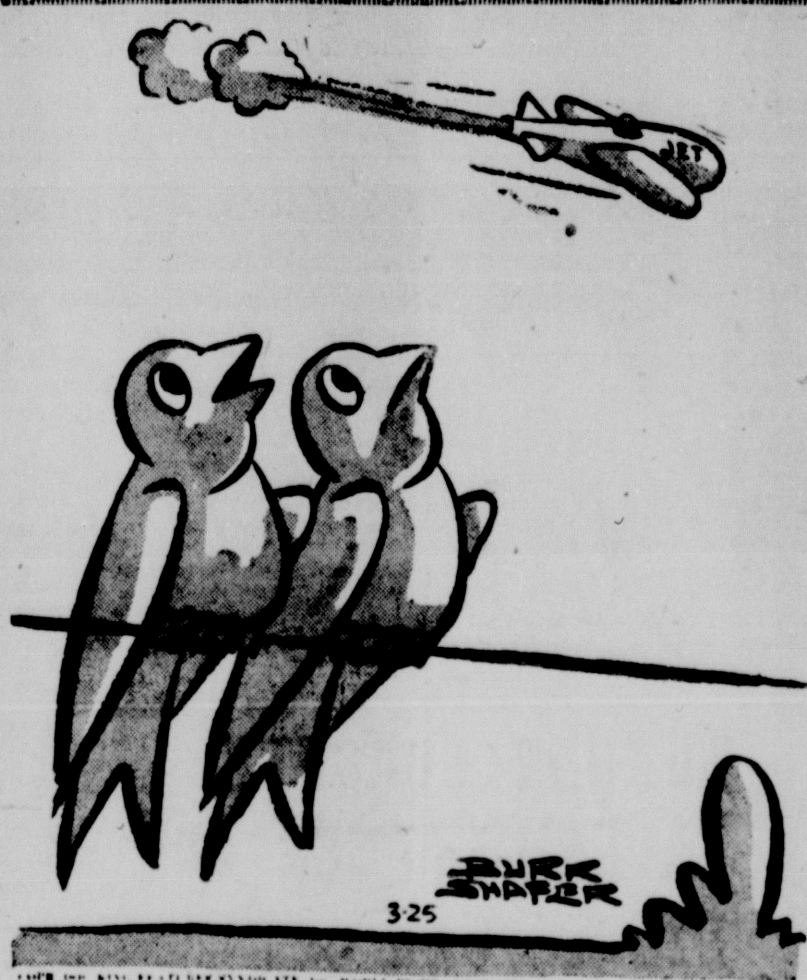

Playing the wife and mother is Beverly Bayne, the great heroine of the long-ago silent film days when she and Francis X. Bushman were the top romantic team of the screen. A. B. Shiffrin is the author and William Cahn the producer.

SOMALILAND PUZZLE

A country almost all desert and terrifically hot does not sound worth coveting. Yet before the war Great Britain, France and Italy divided up between them Somaliland, on the Red Sea below Egypt. The attraction was the harbors, not very good but better than nothing. There may also have been thought of the future, when Ethiopia, lying inland, will need an outlet to the sea.

Now the question arises, what shall become of Somaliland? Italy, as an enemy power and one whose treatment of the natives made her very unpopular, will probably be ruled out. The probable solution is a trusteeship of the United Nations, in which Ethiopia, as well as Great Britain and France, will have a hand.

ATTEMPTING to set up the thirteen of a suit in which you have four cards opposite three may be a perilous adventure if you try it early in the play of a No Trump contract. In case the defenders' six cards do not prove to be evenly divided, with three spades, your effort to set up your own fourth card only sets up a fourth-card for an opponent.

That bidding varied somewhat at the tables of a duplicate game, and so did the play. Emphatically different it was at two tables where South played for 3-No Trumps and West led the K of his partner's heart suit. One declarer, optimistically taking everything possible for granted, was beaten two tricks, whereas the other, by means of two simple safety plays, made the contract.

The optimist's first mistake was in taking the heart K lead with the A. He led to the diamond K, then offered the spade J. The Q and A covered. Then he led the spade 3 to the 10 and brought back the 5 to the K, hoping that would set up his 6, but it only established West's 8 instead. Next he went to dummy with the diamond A—which, of course, set up East's 10—and led the club K. East came in with the A, and did not immediately cash his diamond 10; he led the heart J. Dummy's Q won that, and then the club 5 was led to finesse the 10. When the J won, West cashed his spade 8 and led to the diamond 10, so that East then scored the heart 10 and 7 to set it two.

The other declarer held up on the diamond K lead, winning the second diamond with the Q. The spade J-Q-A trick followed, then the club K to the A. The heart J went to the A, the spade 10 was scored, then the club 10 finessed to the J. West led a spade back to the A. Then the diamond A and K and the club Q and 9 completed the game for that declarer, the spade 6 being given up to West's 8 for the last trick. By not taking the first heart, not setting up the spade 8 early and not setting up the diamond 10 as a re-entry for East's hearts, he had played it safe all the way.

She stood still and I could see, even at this distance, that she looked exhausted. "Oh, that's dreadful! I thought I'd found it at last," she said in a curiously breathless voice.

"I'm sorry, you haven't. Won't you come in and rest a while?" Dick invited.

"Thank you. If I may? I've been walking for hours and hours," she said in brief gasps as Dick helped her up the steps. And then sank into the first chair—a small iron one—with a long drawn sigh of relief.

Our late visitor was very lovely, in spite of her exhaustion and definitely disheveled state. She was about my age, or a little older, I judged, and a decidedly Nordic type. With silvery blond, smooth

"It was so lovely when I got off the train I thought I'd walk to the hotel," she explained in her breathless way. "I asked the driver they'd sent which was a pretty road, when I gave him my bags, but I must have misunderstood his directions."

"You mean you came on the six fifty-five and have been walking ever since?" Dick asked, appalled. She nodded. "Yes. The man said it would be a good half hour, but the road turned and—it became quite wild—all thick woods. And the houses I did find were shuttered and closed."

"And you've had nothing to eat and are starved," I said, taking over for my sister after a mute exchange of glances with Dick. "Better come inside and sit down on a more comfortable chair, while I go raid the ice box for you."

She was hardly able to get up from her hard seat. "Thank you. You are terribly kind, Mrs. —?" she murmured as Dick propelled her into the house.

"Miss Applebee," I corrected. "This is your host, Mr. Pearce. I'm Mrs. Pearce's sister, and she has already gone to bed. This is another house guest, Dr. Hunt Berwick."

"My name is Kenneth. Mrs. Brenda Knight," she returned in introduction, sinking gratefully into the corner of a big couch, while I turned kitchenward, followed by Hunt, who had been a silent spectator so far.

"I don't like her looks," he whispered to me the moment we were out of the room.

I stopped and gaped at him. "You don't? But she's a ravishing beauty!" He made an impatient gesture. "Bother her beauty. I mean—she looks as if something were wrong."

"Of course there is. She's hungry and needs food," I told him practically. He shrugged and said, "Hope you're right and it's nothing worse," and went back into the drawing room.

I walked on to the kitchen and started to forage in the pantry. I had just finished arranging an appetizing assortment of cold cuts and a steaming cup of hot broth on a tray when Dick burst in, white around the gills and positively jittering with fear.

"She's fainted," he jabbered at me. "She passed out just as I was taking her a drink. Hunt's working on her, but I dunno—she looks dead to me!"

I thrust my tray into his hands. "Don't be a jackass," I scolded him. "She's fainted with hunger, that's all. Just you bring her this."

"I'm a fool," she told me, unnecessarily. "It's probably because I'm all in, but—your kindness makes me cry."

I said a few polite nothings, deposited the things I'd brought in their proper places, and fled.

Aunt Jane has imbued me with a healthy distaste for personal dramatics, and the weeping-willow attitude of our wandering guest seemed somewhat exaggerated to me. A touch of humor really would have been much more helpful in the situation.

YOU'RE TELLING ME!

THE CEILINGS of those post-war cars should be raised—and we don't mean by the OPA, either. Up to now autos have afforded you plenty of head room—if you are a Signer midget.

Getting into and out of those pre-war cars qualified any veteran motorist as a highly competent contortionist.

The callouses on his head, says Zadok Dumkopf, furnished an excellent relief map of the chuck holes in the roads he had traveled.

In some of those pre-war jobs a six-foot driver had to crouch over the wheel until he looked remarkably like old Uncle Abner milking the spotted Holstein.

Grandpappy Jenkins says he has cracked his noggin on his car ceiling so often that the top now has a cupola in it that fits his head like a skull cap.

Those open skylight taxis are a great invention. They have taken many a headache out of the business of being a rear seat passenger.

Over-Sensitivity to Salicylates

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

IT HAS often been said that one man's meat is another man's poison and the same thing is true of medical drugs.

Some people, for instance, are over-sensitive even to such a commonly used drug as aspirin, or preparations like aspirin, known as salicylates. Taking of these drugs even in moderate doses by such sensitive individuals may result in a condition known as salicylism, which is, in reality, a kind of poisoning.

Habitual Pain-Relievers

Some persons, too, may develop the same disorder from the habitual taking of such preparations to relieve any and every ache or pain, often in large doses. This is bad business for two reasons: First, because these people may be suffering from an ailment which requires real treatment and second, because salicylism is no joke.

The most common symptom of salicylism is ringing in the ears. Other symptoms which occur often are dizziness, sickness to the stomach, and vomiting. Sometimes, there are fever, rapid breathing and mental disturbances.

The sickness to the stomach and vomiting is not due to the effect of the salicylate on the lining membrane of the stomach but, according to Drs. Charles J. Caravati and Clarence E. Whims of the M.C.A.U.S., come from the action of the drugs on the nervous system. This is proven by the fact that these symptoms occur whether salicylates are given by injection into a vein or taken by mouth.

Large Doses

Salicylates are often given in large doses in the treatment of rheumatic fever, a condition which causes pain and swelling of the joints, fever and, sometimes, damage to the heart. When such treatment is carried out, the patient must be carefully watched to make sure that salicylism does not develop. If it does, prompt treatment should be carried out.

If the salicylism is severe, mental excitement, confusion and delirium may develop. The patient is restless and speaks incoherently and occasionally is manicured. These first symptoms of stimulation of the nervous system are followed by depression and unconsciousness.

According to Drs. Caravati and Whims, the treatment for salicylism consists in discontinuing the use of the salicylates, giving large doses of some alkaline substance such as baking soda and giving plenty of fluids, both by injection and by mouth, using methods to reduce fever, giving plenty of food and such drugs as caffeine or ephedrine if there is severe depression of the nervous system.

Salicylates are very useful drugs, when properly used. Nonetheless, they may prove dangerous when taken indiscriminately and in over-large quantities. Hence they should be taken only when prescribed by a physician, a man who understands both their uses and their dangers.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

N. R.: I am a woman thirty-five years of age. My legs turn a dark red color on the front and sides. At times, there is itching. What causes this?

Answer: The condition you describe may be due to some trouble with your circulation, vitamin deficiency or to some type of skin disease. It would appear advisable to consult a skin specialist so that the exact cause may be determined.

Impossible to Keep Atomic Bomb Secret, Says Scientist
Hoover to Make Food Tour Of Europe Without Newsman

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—William Higginbotham, chairman of the Federation of American Scientists, insists that atom bomb secrets cannot be kept.

Higginbotham asserts: "No FBI and no Army vigilance can keep the world from finding out what we know. Our secrets are leaking out at the rate of 20 million protons a second from every cyclotron in the world."

"They are being revealed wherever nature of the world is studied by any scientist of any nationality, American, Canadian, Russian or Chinese."

The atom expert insists, therefore, that rigid, international controls must be worked out now. He contends that a policy of secrecy only slightly postpones the day of reckoning, until other nations are making atom bombs.

Higginbotham and fellow scientists believe the whole concept of military security should be re-examined in the light of total scientific warfare. He points out that American scientists already have pretty well calculated what the results of the forthcoming atom bomb tests in the Marshall Islands will be and that "scientists in other countries can also calculate."

The scientist argues that the "No. 1 secret" which should be held is the answer to the question: "What kind of world order must we have to save civilization?"

He insists that in that answer lies the best—perhaps the only—defense against the dread power of the atomic bomb.

● HERBERT HOOVER, honorary chairman of President Truman's famine emergency committee, will make his inspection of starving Europe without being accompanied by members of the United States press. He stood firm by this decision, despite high administration pressure to take at least three leading correspondents with him.

Instead, Hoover is taking only his old cronies of the World War I food relief program and a single representative of the agriculture department.

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson reminded Hoover, before the latter made his "no press" decision, that much of the success of the program to induce Americans voluntarily to reduce their rations depends on the publicity given the famine emergency.

Anderson told Hoover flatly that "we feel it is highly important for you to take reporters from the three press associations so we can have daily stories of the progress and findings of your trip through Europe."

He even offered to supply Hoover with a larger plane so that correspondents could travel right with him. But Hoover remained adamant.

● IN THESE DAYS OF DEBATE over Army-Navy preferences for academy trained men, some critics of Navy brass cite this incident: Hardboiled, austere Adm. Ernest J. King—before he became chief of naval operations—was called on to present, in formal ceremonies, a decoration to an ensign who had distinguished himself as a Navy aviator.

The youth appeared smartly in King's office in a stiffly starched and creased white uniform. He was evidently embarrassed and overawed.

King, equally stiff and unsmiling, read the citation. The ensign bent backward at attention, in the best Navy tradition.

When over, King eyed the youth.

"Well, son," he said, "which class were you in at the academy?" Without a flinch the boy countered: "What academy, admiral, sir?" King grunted, almost inaudibly, and dismissed the session.

Wedding Date For Moats-Wolf Nuptials Set For March 30

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Wolf, North Court street, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Norma Jean, to Harold R. Moats, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Moats, North Court street.

Miss Wolf is a graduate of Circleville high school. Mr. Moats was recently discharged from the Navy. The wedding will take place March 30.

Members of the Circleville W. C. T. U. will hold a combined institute with the Salem W. C. T. U. Friday at 10 a. m. in the home of Mrs. J. O. Eagleson, North Pickaway street. A covered dish luncheon will be served and each member is asked to bring table service.

Helps build up resistance against MONTHLY FEMALE PAIN

When taken regularly! Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has more than relieved monthly pain when due to functional periodic disturbances. It also relieves accompanying weak, tired, nervous, jittery feelings — of such nature. Taken regularly—Pinkham's Compound helps build up resistance against such monthly distress. Pinkham's Compound is worth trying!

PITTSBURGH RALLY

Robert St. John, noted NBC news commentator and news analyst, and Judge Samuel A. Weiss, will headline a workers' rally of the 1946 $1,500,000 United Jewish Fund Emergency Appeal, Monday at 8:30 p. m. in the William Penn Hotel, Pittsburgh, Pa. In making the announcement that St. John would speak under the auspices of the Jewish Fund Appeal, Judge Benjamin Lencer, general chairman of the campaign, indicated that the famed NBC commentator was the forerunner of a number of world-famous personalities who would be brought to Pittsburgh to tell the story of the life and death issues that italicize this year's drive which opens May 5.

WILL ANSWER FANS

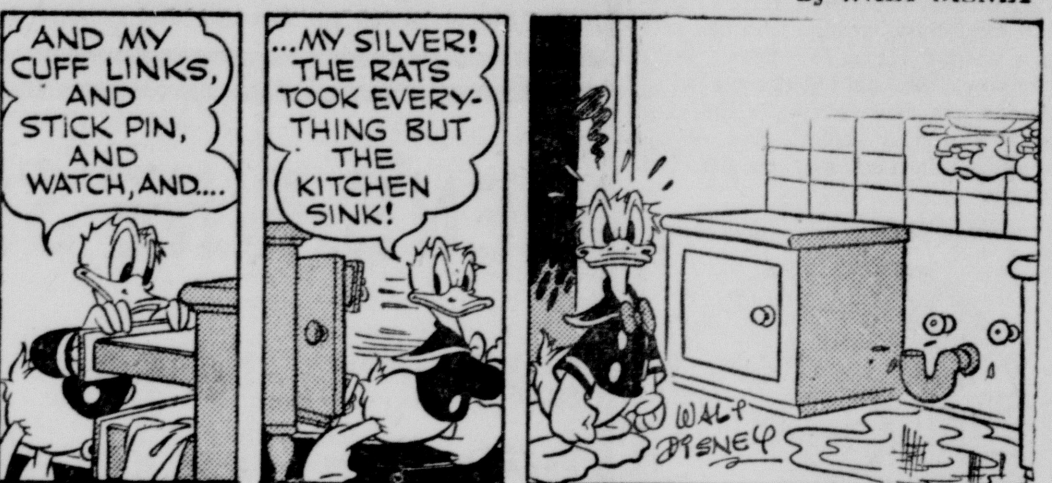

Michael Douglas, Kay Kyser's star singing scholar, will answer mail from Michael Douglas Fan Clubs all over the country on the "College of Musical Knowledge" over NBC Wednesday at 10 p. m. EST. In response to his listeners' letters, Douglas will sing a medley of songs most often requested. They include: "Oh What It Seemed To Be," "Wait and See," "The House I Live In," and "The Bells of St. Mary's."

LucyAnne Polk, the Ol' Professor's talented 18-year-old campus freshman, will sing two numbers: "Shoo Fly Pie," and "Atlanta, Ga." The musical portion of the program will close with Trudy Erwin, Jack Martin and the Sweet Shop Quartet singing "Chico, Chico," "Who's Sorry Now?" and "One-zy, Two-zy."

"THE GENERAL'S WIFE"

Margaret Taylor was gently reared in Baltimore, but she fell in love with a soldier, and when she married literally lived the quotation "whither thou goest." For 30 years she lived on Army Posts. Little wonder she was much maligned by the women of Washington, when her husband went to the White House. Cavalcade tells the story of this great lady and devoted wife, Monday, over NBC when lovely Agnes Moorehead stars in the sympathetic, warm, human drama, "The General's Wife." When Margaret McClellan Smith was a young belle in Maryland, the dashing Lieutenant Zachary Taylor wooed and won her. She soldiered with him, bore his children, and joined him on the field of battle. Eventually she acquired some of the Army language in her speech. It was this that made her life in the White House as First Lady of the Land something less than smooth. However, her innate greatness and her life-long devotion and love for her husband carried her through the difficult time.

BOB HAWK

Bob Hawk, star of the Monday night CBS comedy quiz that bears his name, had a farmer on his session who proved to be as competent in the laugh department as he undoubtedly is on the old home-stand. When Bob asked him if he grew melons the farmer replied: "I did once but I didn't harvest them. The vines grew so fast, they wore the melons out dragging 'em around."

"THIS IS MY BEST"

Alexis Smith and Barry Sullivan of the screen will headline the radio adaptation of "That Man Is Here Again," by George Bradshaw and Robert Thomsen, which will be aired on the CBS "This Is My Best" program Tuesday.

SHERLOCK HOLMES

The seemingly impossible theft of a famous painting from a strong room to which only the painter has the combination, leads Sherlock Holmes into "The Adventure of the Girl With the Gazelle," to be heard on "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," Monday (8:30 to 9 p. m., EST), over Mutual. The role of the Baker Street detective is played by Basil

Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce is heard as Dr. Watson.

"THE FALCON"

Everybody wants to get into the act on the "Adventures of the Falcon" episode, "A Gem of a Murder," to be heard over Mutual, Tuesday, (8:30 to 9 p. m., EST) when a blackmailing racketeer is killed and at least two suspects claim they "dunit." But Mike Waring (the Falcon) doesn't like to see innocent people playing musical chairs with the "hot seat," so he pursues the real murderer with his usual astuteness and non-chalance. James Meighan plays the Falcon, Carlo De Angelo directs the series.

RADIO THEATRE

Danny Kaye and Virginia Mayo will recreate for Radio Theatre their cinema comedy-hit, "Wonder Man" when it is presented Monday at 9 p. m. (EST) over the Columbia network. William Keighley is producer on the full-hour dramatic program. Kaye plays a dual role, as twins, one being a clownish night club performer; the other a mild-mannered, studious type. Complications set in when the performer twin is a victim of gangster killing for knowing too much inside information. After the slaying, the studious twin is haunted by the other's spirit and driven to taking his place and thus helps to run down his killers. The fusion of spirits leads to romantic complications as well. On one occasion he finds himself paying court to the wrong girl and getting in trouble with his true love, played by Virginia Mayo. The zany chaos eventually clears up and leaves "Wonder Man" one of the year's most outstanding comedies. Lou Silvers arranges and conducts the special musical interludes for Radio Theatre.

MUSICAL TRIBUTE

Les Brown and his orchestra will lead off the final rounds week of "Spotlight Bands," Monday, with a 9:30 p. m. (EST) Mutual network broadcast from the grand ballroom of the St. George Hotel, Brooklyn, N. Y. "Spotlight" will be paying a musical tribute to the executives and personnel of American Overseas Airlines, Inc., for their important contributions to victory over the Axis.

In making the announcement that St. John would speak under the auspices of the Jewish Fund Appeal, Judge Benjamin Lencher, general chairman of the campaign, indicated that the famed NBC commentator was the forerunner of a number of world-famous personalities who would be brought to Pittsburgh to tell the story of the life and death issues that italicize this year's drive which opens May 5.

WILL ANSWER FANS

Michael Douglas, Kay Kyser's star singing scholar, will answer mail from Michael Douglas Fan Clubs all over the country on the "College of Musical Knowledge" over NBC Wednesday at 10 p. m. EST. In response to his listeners' letters, Douglas will sing a medley of songs most often requested. They include: "Oh What It Seemed To Be," "Wait and See," "The House I Live In," and "The Bells of St. Mary's." LucyAnne Polk, the Ol' Professor's talented 18-year-old campus freshman, will sing two numbers: "Shoo Fly Pie," and "Atlanta, Ga." The musical portion of the program will close with Trudy Erwin, Jack Martin and the Sweet Shop Quartet singing "Chico, Chico," "Who's Sorry Now?" and "One-zz, Two-zz."

"THE GENERAL'S WIFE"

Margaret Taylor was gently reared in Baltimore, but she fell in love with a soldier, and when she married literally lived the quotation "whither thou goest". For 30 years she lived on Army Posts. Little wonder she was much maligned by the women of Washington, when her husband went to the White House, Cavalcade tells the story of this great lady and devoted wife, Monday, over NBC when lovely Agnes Moorehead stars in the sympathetic, warm, human drama, "The General's Wife". When Margaret McClellan Smith was a young belle in Maryland, the dashing Lieutenant Zachary Taylor wooed and won her. She soldiered with him, bore his children, and joined him on the field of battle. Inevitably she acquired some of the Army language in her speech. It was this that made her life in the White House as First Lady of the Land something less than smooth. However, her innate greatness and her life-long devotion and love for her husband carried her through the difficult time.

BOB HAWK

Bob Hawk, star of the Monday night CBS comedy quiz that bears his name, had a farmer on his session who proved to be as competent in the laugh department as he undoubtedly is on the old homestead. When Bob asked him if he grew melons the farmer replied: "I did once but I didn't harvest them. The vines grew so fast, they were the melons out dragging 'em around."

"THIS IS MY BEST"

Alexis Smith and Barry Sullivan of the screen will headline the radio adaptation of "That Man Is Here Again," by George Bradshaw and Robert Thomsen, which will be aired on the CBS "This Is My Best" program Tuesday.

SHERLOCK HOLMES

The seemingly impossible theft of a famous painting from a strong room to which only the painter has the combination, leads Sherlock Holmes into "The Adventure of the Girl with the Gazelle," to be heard on "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," Monday (8:30 to 9 p. m., EST), over Mutual. OPA Will Increase Ceiling Prices On Beef And Mutton April 1

CONSUMER COST WILL AVERAGE ABOUT 1 1/2 PCT.

Boosts On Pork, Sausage And Variety Items To Follow Around April 10

Meat eaters in the Circleville area will pay higher prices for beef — if any is available — and also veal, lamb and mutton, beginning April 1, according to notification received Tuesday in Circleville from the Cincinnati district office of the OPA.

Furthermore, on or about April 10, the announcement said, higher ceiling prices will be announced on pork, sausage, and variety meats.

Minor Hike Indicated

The OPA indicated that the price increase to the consumer will average about one and one-half per cent over present prices.

Wage increases for packing house workers led to a recent increase in wholesale prices, the OPA said, and the planned hike in retail prices comes as a consequence.

The delay in announcing and making effective the higher retail prices for meat, the OPA announcement explained, is due to the time required to finish the computation of something like 27,000 prices used on lists of dollar-and-cent ceiling figures.

These ceilings vary according to the annual sales volume in the three classes of retail stores. Furthermore, the prices must be adjusted to 10 different trading zones.

Time Is Needed

Also, the OPA said, time is needed for the printing and distribution to the meat retail dealers of the tables of prices showing the ceilings on each cut and grade of meat.

As one means of smashing the "black market" in beef cattle the food section of the OPA Cincinnati district office is arranging a series of meetings throughout southern Ohio to acquaint slaughterers with new regulations which require all slaughterers, large and small, to report the number of cattle they slaughter and the prices paid for live cattle under Maximum Price Regulation No. 574.

MODERN BLUEBEARD FACES COURT

IN OR OUT OF FICTION there is no parallel for the amazing case of Marcel Petiot, doctor and former mayor of Villeneuve-sur-Yonne, France, who boastfully insists that he murdered 63 persons—rather than a mere 26 as charged. Shown here chatting with his lawyer, M. Floriot, as his trial opened in Paris, Petiot seeks to defend his crimes as those of a patriot who killed only Gestapo men, spies and others seeking to escape France in war time. The prosecution says he murdered for profit and robbed his victims of valuable gems and money. (International Radiophoto)

Local Chapter Appeals For Volunteers To Sew, Knit Gloves, Sweaters

An appeal for women who can sew or knit to volunteer their services to the Pickaway County chapter of the American Red Cross was sounded Monday.

The production corps of the Red Cross, under direction of Mrs. Will Mack, is swinging into the quota set for 1946. Mrs. C. G. Stewart has charge of the knitting in this corps and she reported a need for volunteer knitters to help turn the yarn on hand into scarves, sweaters and gloves. Mrs. Stewart said that yarn may be called for at any time at Red Cross headquarters.

In the sewing department, Mrs. Charles Hampton directs the cutting and sewing of the 125 children's capes that Pickaway County has been asked to furnish. To make this project a success, Mrs. Hampton explained, women who can sew are needed for a few hours work per week. She said that the sewing rooms are open every Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. Work may be taken out and completed at home.

LOCAL WOMAN HURT IN CRASH

Mrs. Elizabeth Given Receives Broken Shoulder In Indiana Collision

Mrs. Elizabeth Given, 620 South Court street, was in St. Mary's hospital at Evansville, Ind., Monday, suffering from a shoulder fracture and other injuries received in an automobile collision. News of the accident was received by relatives in Circleville from her husband, H. B. Given, in Evansville.

The sedan driven by Given was in collision, near Evansville last Friday, with an automobile which was driven upon the highway from a side road. It was said that Given's view was obstructed by a truck. The Given automobile was badly damaged.

Mrs. Given had been at Martin, Tenn., for about five weeks caring for her mother who was seriously ill. Given drove to Martin and was bringing his wife home at the time of the collision.
